

SecureAware[®] – Awareness package

- Do you require your users to adopt and understand your information security policy?
- Would you like to keep track of your employees' security competencies?
- Is your information security program a bit long-winded and boring?
- Do you want to strengthen a key part of your information security system?

Most organisations and businesses today have information security policies or guidelines covering secure information handling within the company. But the mere existence of rules doesn't necessarily mean that they're effective – for this, two other elements are required. Knowledge is the first – the people expected to comply with the rules need to know them. Acceptance is the second – rules must be based and/or presented in a practical work context so employees understand their relevance. Many of us don't feel motivated to follow rules if we don't understand them or see them as meaningless – particularly true when it comes to complex information security rules!

When creating a programme of awareness activities, you need to get the dosage just right. SecureAware's Awareness package includes a range of features which keeps the time spent by your IT staff, users and other employees to a minimum.

- User Group segregation
- Automatically generated quizzes – succinct and topic-specific
- E-tutorials (shown only when test results require)
- Screensaver, showing selected information security rules each month
